

For event organisers in Malaysia, where relationships are central to business and professional success, making networking sessions work is essential. A well-designed networking session can transform an event from a passive learning experience into an active, relationship-building opportunity. A poorly designed one can leave attendees feeling frustrated and unfulfilled. Here are five ways to make your event management event company event organizer malaysia event networking sessions work.

Why Clear Goals Matter

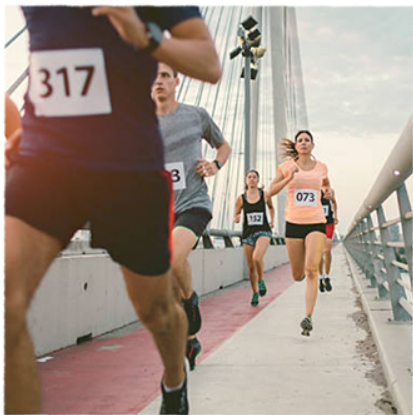

Consider providing conversation starters or ice-breaker questions. These can help to break the ice and get people talking. At Kollysphere, we help our clients define the objectives of their networking sessions. We help them design the <https://kollysphere.com/> format to align with those objectives. We also help them communicate the purpose to attendees so they know what to expect and how to participate. Formats That Encourage Connection

Consider a structured networking format. Speed networking is a popular option. Attendees are paired up for short, timed conversations, then rotate to the next person. This ensures that everyone meets a variety of people. Consider the flow. Plan the session so that attendees have the opportunity to meet multiple people, not just the person next to them. Kollysphere's experts can help you choose the right format for your audience and objectives.

3. Create a Welcoming Environment

Consider the sensory experience. Use lighting, scent, and décor to create an inviting atmosphere. Set the tone from the beginning. Welcome attendees warmly. Explain the format and the objectives. Encourage them to be open and curious. The team at Kollysphere can help you with room layout, lighting, music, and refreshments.

The Role of the Facilitator

If you have a large group, consider using multiple facilitators. Each facilitator can be responsible for a specific zone or table. Debrief after the session. Ask attendees what worked and what could be improved. Use this feedback to refine your future networking sessions. Kollysphere's event specialists can provide facilitators for your networking sessions.

The Importance of Follow-Up

Encourage attendees to follow up with each other. Provide guidance on how to write a follow-up message. At Kollysphere, we help our clients design follow-up strategies for their networking sessions. We help them create ways for attendees to stay connected and to continue the conversation. Kollysphere's event specialists can help you design follow-up strategies for your networking sessions.
